

1 March 2021

Dear Colleagues, Parents, Guardians and students in the Senior School and Sixth Form,

I write to you with an update following today's media briefing, I hope you are pleased to hear that we will return to College next week. We are really looking forward to seeing pupils and students face to face and thank them for their resilience, hard work and sense of fun during this second period of lockdown. The States' media release is attached for your reference.

We are currently finalising details to share with everyone, regarding the return from lockdown on Monday 8 March 2021. We anticipate that we will be able to share the more detailed document on Wednesday.

To provide a brief outline of our plans, in line with Public Health requirements, all pupils and students will return on Monday 8 March 2021, with the exception of Key Stages 4 and 5. Work will be set by the teachers for all Key Stage 4 and 5 Monday classes, with these year groups returning to College on Tuesday 9 March 2021. This staggered return is linked to the bubbling as classes or forms for the younger pupils and students and to year-group bubbles for those studying GCSEs or A-levels.

To prepare the College and to give colleagues time to be briefed and to organise workspaces, no classes will take place on Thursday and Friday of this week. Pupils are encouraged to read, draw, play or access online resources and students are asked to consolidate files and tidy their work stored on their devices, as well as read, produce revision materials, and use online resources. Pupils and students will also be asked to attend briefing meetings to ensure that they are prepared to return safely to College and any concerns can be considered.

Please note that arrangements for the children of essential workers and others who have attended College during lockdown continue to be able to come into College for childcare and supervision on Thursday and Friday this week. Please confirm with Miss McClean, registrar@ladiescollege.ac.gg if you have any requirements for these days.

I hope that parents are understanding and supportive of the above arrangements for our return. Colleagues have worked incredibly hard to provide structured learning from Day 1, often under challenging circumstances. I believe that providing dedicated time to meet with colleagues (virtually) and for them to manage the significant work which is required to return to College will ultimately benefit pupils and students, support colleagues with their well-being and ensure a calm and safe return for us all. Our College community's response to this recent lockdown has been immense and sincere thanks are extended to everyone.

In terms of additional considerations linked to our return, we have been asked to advise that bus services will continue be extremely limited when schools reopen due to the need to maintain social distancing on public transport. For that reason and unless it is essential for your child to catch the bus, please do everything possible to support them to travel to and from College via other methods, such as walking or cycling. The last thing we want is students stranded at a bus stop because there is not enough room for them to travel, so the use of public transport should be avoided if possible.

May I close by thanking you so much, colleagues, parents, guardians, and students. Your encouragement, understanding and support has been most welcome, and I thank you for all you have done, are doing and will do.

Stay safe, stay well, stay in touch.

Yours sincerely

Ashley Clancy

Schools, college and early years providers to re-open on Monday 8th March

---

The majority of young people will be able to return to schools, college and early years settings on Monday 8th March, as long as the positive strides made since we entered lockdown are maintained.

Secondary school students will be split and return over two days, with Years 7, 8 and 9 returning on Monday while Year 10 and upwards will return on Tuesday 9th March. This will allow younger students in secondary schools to familiarise themselves with the introduction of their new class bubbles, before older students return to school the following day.

All other students can return to educational settings on Monday 8th March.

The decision was taken to re-open educational settings following discussions by the Civil Contingencies Authority, the Committee for Education, Sport & Culture and Public Health Services.

It is hoped the re-opening of schools may be able align with the island moving to Stage 2 of the Exit from Lockdown Framework, however no decision has yet been made. The CCA will meet tomorrow to examine the latest Public Health evidence and consider the wider implication of moving to Stage 2, and an update will be provided at Wednesday's live briefing.

However, even if more time is needed before the island moves to Stage 2 – a move which would significantly reduce restrictions for islanders and businesses - the decision has been taken that it is now safe enough for schools to re-open from Monday. This is possible due to the substantial work carried out between Dr Brink and the Public Health team and senior educationalists to ensure specific measures are in place to support the return of education in a safe way.

These include:

- Classroom bubbles for primary schools and Years 7-9 in Secondary, with year-group bubbles for older students.
- The recommended use of face-coverings for older students and staff
- One-metre social distancing, wherever this is possible

- Staggered start and finish times
- Enhanced cleaning regime for education settings
- Limited school transport service to minimise contact between students
- A specific Public Health testing strategy for staff in education, as well of for some students.

Regarding the specific testing strategy for education, all staff including early year providers will be tested prior to education settings re-opening on a voluntary basis. Continued surveillance testing of the workforce will be carried out, along with a programme of ongoing screening for groups of students in older year groups once schools re-open.

Optional learning activities (as opposed to the Distance Learning offer) will be provided for children by their schools for Thursday 4th and Friday 5th March, as staff will be required to focus on using those two days to prepare for a return to classroom teaching next week.

Education settings will provide childcare and supervision for the children of essential workers (where both parents are classed as essential) and invited vulnerable students on Thursday 4th and Friday 5th, as has been the case throughout lockdown.

Further details have been published today to help parents and young people understand how education will 'look and feel' when students return. A frequently asked questions document has been published at www.covid19.gov.gg/guidance/education. This document will be updated as needed.

Deputy Andrea Dudley-Owen, President of the Committee for Education, Sport & Culture, said:

'This is very welcome news for many of us in the community. Schools have put on an excellent Distance Learning programme which has successfully catered for all of our 9,000 plus students and we thank our staff for their immense efforts during the lockdown to deliver this. Nevertheless, we recognise it has been very difficult for working parents to juggle the challenges of continuing to work from home whilst looking after and supporting their children with Distance Learning. We are also aware that that a prolonged period of isolation from their peers will negatively impact the wellbeing of children and young people and it is has been a priority to get them back into school as soon as it is safe to do so.

'With the support of the Director of Public Health, we have developed a detailed "enhanced measures" approach. The safety of children and staff remains paramount and we are confident that the suite of measures in place will enable sites to open to all students. As discussions with Public Health developed it became clear that phasing the return of students over a one week period, as had originally been planned, offered no advantage on safety grounds. This is why our students will be returning together on Monday and Tuesday next week.'

Dr Nicola Brink, Director of Public Health, said:

‘We have worked really closely with Education colleagues on this and, while nothing is ever entirely risk free, we believe that with the right mitigations in place we can safely re-open schools and other education providers to all students. The package of measures that we have developed with Education are really important to make this as safe as possible for staff and students, and also help us quickly contain the situation should any positive cases emerge once schools re-open.’

Deputy Peter Ferbrache, Chairman of the Civil Contingencies Authority, said:

‘This is a very positive step and is evidence of the huge strides we have made as a community since going into lockdown. The CCA is not yet in a position to confirm that the island as a whole will move into Stage 2 on Monday, as there are further discussions needed before we can make that decision. However, even if we have to wait a little longer before we can move into Stage 2, the significant work carried out by Dr Brink and her team and Education to put in place a range of education-specific measures has resulted in all of us having the confidence that schools can re-open irrespective of the further discussions needed about the timing of Stage 2. I am sure this will be welcome news to many parents and young people.’
