This week we consider: Values - how we apply them in difficult times

Facebook pictures of the week:

We celebrated International Women's Day in style. This picture shows Tuesday's panel discussion, chaired by the Lt. Governor. The panel consisted of Sarah Crane (director of USA.gov under Barack Obama, who joined online from Washington D.C), Jennifer King (UK Schools Engagement Lead for Microsoft), Lucy Kirby (Director of The Digital Greenhouse), and Amy Richards (Global Head of Commercial Effectiveness for Mercer). The discussion was focused on gender inequality and the digital world. We were impressed by each panellist's open and frank engagement.

"That was AWESOME!" This was the verdict from the Removes who led our first ever joint assembly - live online - with Year 7 students from Cheltenham Ladies' College. Students from each school spoke about their communities, their schools, and (with International Women's Day in mind) the challenges and opportunities for women in their local area. It was lovely to see the students waving at each other as soon as the livestream began, and any shyness was quickly forgotten as both colleges launched into spontaneous Mexican waves!
