

Jersey Snow Warning Service.

Warning Level

RED

A period of snow is expected on Thursday. It will start after midnight, becoming prolonged and perhaps heavier towards morning, combined with strong to gale force winds is likely to lead to blizzard conditions at times. An accumulation of around 4 to 8 cm of snow is expected across the island with significant drifting expected to occur. Air temperatures are expected to gradually rise to above freezing during the afternoon. Ground temperatures are likely to remain below freezing until later in the evening. It is expected that the snow will turn mostly to rain during the afternoon but there is a risk of freezing rain for a time. Further updates will be issued when necessary.

Issued at 11:20 UTC, Wednesday, February 28, 2018.

COLOUR	WARNING	ACTION
GREEN	No snow	None
YELLOW	Snow flurries	Caution
ORANGE	Light to moderate snowfall	Remain vigilant. Check the latest forecast.
RED	Heavy snow / blizzard	Follow advice of authorities. Check the latest forecast.